

Ceramic ferrule supplier manufacturers

Article Overview

Leading ceramic ferrule manufacturers include Kientec Systems, Industrial Ceramics Ltd., and Rosen Ceramic Components, offering both standard and custom ferrules for optical, industrial, and high-temperature applications.

Key Manufacturers and Offerings

Kientec Systems specializes in zirconia and alumina ceramic ferrules for optical and scientific applications. They provide standard and custom ferrules with inside diameters from 80 to 1100 microns and lengths from 2.5mm to 22.5mm. Custom features include multi-step designs, countersinks, flats, slots, grooves, and chamfers. Their ferrules are used in FC, ST, SC, LC, and SMA connectors, and they also offer high-precision alignment sleeves and ferrule assemblies with flanges made from stainless steel, nickel-plated brass, or copper. Industrial Ceramics Ltd. focuses on refractory and high-temperature ferrules for the petrochemical, sulphur, and waste heat boiler industries. They are renowned for their two-piece hexagonal and solid hexagonal ferrule designs, which are widely used in sulphur recovery units and other high-temperature applications. Industrial Ceramics provides extensive technical support, including CFD modeling, material selection, installation supervision, and after-sales services. Their products are supplied globally to end-users, EPC contractors, and process licensors. Rosen Ceramic Components manufactures zirconia ceramic ferrules primarily for optical communication applications. Their ferrules are designed for high concentricity, low insertion loss, and low back reflection, suitable for single-mode, multi-mode, and special inner diameter ferrules. These ferrules are used in optical connectors, attenuators, and fiber stubs, ensuring durability and precision in repeated mating environments.
